BEHIND THE SCENES

NEW YORK CITY

THAT'S A WRAP

The people who put together the 2011 Swimsuit issue look back on what it meant to them

1 SENIOR ASSOCIATE EDITOR

MJ DAY

Swimsuit 2011* is . . . "Arthritic thumbs."

*@MJ_Day has posted 2,352 tweets (and counting).

2 ASSISTANT MANAGING EDITOR

CHRISTIAN STONE

Swimsuit 2011* is . . . "Shell shocking . . . See-worthy . . . Trop-dead gorgeous."

*Chris, in addition to divining punny headlines for the issue, is an executive producer of the inaugural Swimsuit Selection Show, which will air on DirecTV through the end of March.

3 EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR, SWIM OPERATIONS

KAREN CARPENTER

Swimsuit 2011* is . . . "3-D-licious."

* Karen oversaw the production of 185 videos (see SI.com/swimvideo) and SI's first 3-D video shoot (page 198).

4 EDITOR

DIANE SMITH

Swimsuit 2011* is . . . "Vacuuming sand out of my suitcase."

*Diane was on the road for 75 days producing this issue.

5 ASSISTANT ART DIRECTOR

STEPHEN SKALOCKY

Swimsuit 2011* is . . . "Heavy lifting and no tan."

*The office-bound Skalocky, who had a hand in designing more than 500 pages—including iPad and Galaxy (see SI.com/swimipad and SI.com/swimgalaxy) pages—is awaiting his first Swimsuit trip.

6 CREATIVE DIRECTOR

CHRISTOPHER HERCIK

Swimsuit 2011* is . . . "Sun, sand and sans serif."

*Chris—who predicted three years ago that Irina would one day be on the cover of Swimsuit—has designed seven issues.

7 ASSISTANT EDITOR

DARCIE BAUM

Swimsuit 2011* is . . . "Showering paint off models after a 21-hour shoot."

*Darcie was on hand for all 85 hours of bodypainting (page 88).

PHOTOGRAPHER

BJORN IOOSS

Swimsuit 2011* is . . . "The unimaginable becoming imaginable."

* At the time he filled in the blank, Bjorn—who took the contributors' photo—had no idea that the cover image came from his first shoot, in Hawaii (page 192).

Model Search

HELP WANTED: DETERMINED SELF-STARTERS NEEDED TO ASSIST IN UNCOVERING NEW TALENT. NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY. MUST HAVE AN APPRECIATION FOR NATURAL BEAUTY. POSITION COMES WITH PERKS GALORE. INTERESTED? READ ON . . .

It should go without saying that, as jobs go, selecting new models for the Swimsuit Issue is pretty great. There's little manual labor, no boring PowerPoints to sit through, not much paperwork to fill out. It entails looking at a lot of gorgeous women in bikinis. Sure, it's not always easy (the decisions are often quite difficult), but the gig is as sweet as they come. If somehow you're not convinced, why not give it a try?

On the pages that follow are eight models, one of whom will be chosen by you, the readers, to be a member of the rookie class of 2012. The hopefuls each had one-day photo shoots at the opulent Montage Laguna Beach resort. Mother Nature didn't always make it easy for them; morning temperatures dipped into the 40s, necessitating heated tents on the beach. But the results—both here and at SI.com/modelsearch, where additional photos and exclusive videos can be viewed—made clear that all eight models have what it takes to be a rookie next year.

(SCAN ME!)

So which one will it be? There are two ways to vote: Using the Microsoft Tag Reader app (it's free to download at http://gettag.mobi), scan the tag on this page with your smart phone and then follow the app's instructions for casting your vote. Or go to SI.com/modelsearch. Now get to work.

Swimsuit 2012 hopeful Elisandra made a splash in the Pacific and the mosaic-tiled pool.

BEHIND THE SCENES

LAGUNA BEACH, CALIFORNIA

DOMESTIC BLISS

The tropics? Who needs 'em when there's this slice of heaven down in Southern California

You would swear you were on some remote tropical island. There is the view of the Pacific—available by simply stepping out onto your balcony—the white, sandy beaches and high sloping cliffs that double as the idyllic (perfect, really) vantage point to take in one breathtaking sunset after another. But you are, in fact, in California, little more than an hour's drive from downtown Los Angeles. And that is still a very good thing.

Tucked in the corner of a mile-long spit of sand, Montage Laguna Beach offers more than just great views. For the more active traveler there is snorkeling, kayaking, surfing, beach volleyball and golf. (Wondering what to do with the kids while you're out? They can spend the day in Paintbox, where they'll take part in games and create arts and crafts.)

Of course, it can get a little cool in Southern California during the winter. But the Montage is a resort for all seasons. The elegant mosaic-tiled infinity pool is heated, as is the nearby lap pool.

The crown jewel of the resort is Spa Montage, a 20,000-square-foot facility that is the ultimate fix for relaxation junkies. Therapists will design a treatment to fit individual needs, and the spa's oceanside location factors prominently: Treatments include water therapy, and seaweed and clay wraps. Don't just leave when you're done. Both men's and women's locker rooms are equipped with waterfall whirlpools treated with thermal mineral salts imported from Hungary.

Yes, Hungarian bath salts. An ironic—but splendid—finishing touch to this American beauty.

As the shoot at CuisinArt made evident, Bachelor Brad has his hands full in making his decision.

BACHELOR PARTY

Dates don't get much more interesting than this: being whisked to Anguilla to live the life of a Swimsuit model for a day—and having it viewed by millions

Most dates—at least of the type that might one day lead to an exchanging of rings—don't begin at two in the morning. Then again, most dates don't include a surprise trip to the Caribbean island of Anguilla, nor are they conducted and parsed before nearly 10 million sets of eyes.

Such is life on ABC's The Bachelor, where contestants learn to expect the unexpected. But even by the show's untraditional standards, the date at the center of the Valentine's Day episode was special. Ashley Hebert, Michelle Money and Chantal O'Brien were roused from their beds at the CuisinArt Hotel & Spa in Anguilla (which also housed the SI crew) by the show's titular star, Brad Womack. They were then taken, bleary-eyed, to meet Swimsuit senior associate editor MJ Day, who told them how they'd be spending the next 10 hours: having their hair done by Peter Butler, their makeup done by Tracy Murphy and being fitted for swimsuits, all so they could take part in a sunrise photo shoot with ace lensman Raphael Mazzucco (see Philippines shoot on page 52).

Brad stuck around for the fittings—he helped select the suits—and the shoots. (Alas, despite Day's best efforts, he refused to get the full Swimsuit experience by trying on a bikini.) Each bachelorette was shot on her own, then with Brad.

The results? Safe to say that none of the contestants looks out of place in these pages. (Additional pictures and video clips of each woman can be seen at SI.com/bachelor.) "I don't know which bachelorette Brad will decide to go with," says Day, who will find out on March 14 when the season finale airs. "But there's at least one area in which they definitely all have desirable qualities."

THE INTERVIEW WITH
CHRISSY TEIGEN AND JOHN LEGEND

The model and her Grammy-winning boyfriend on football, pillow fights and pillow talk, and, uh, A-Rod

Dan Patrick: Does Chrissy understand what it's like to be an Ohio State fan, John?
John Legend: She's beginning to learn, because I am very focused on football Saturdays.
Chrissy Teigen: I am the I-O to his O-H. John says, "O-H," and I complete it every time.
DP: How many games would you go to if you could?
JL: I don't like going to football games. I like watching them on television. When you go to a game, it's hard to focus. There's so much going on, and it's cold. I'd rather sit and watch it and get replays and commentary.
CT: And his wifey cooks for him. And all his friends.
DP: How do you negotiate how much sports you're allowed to watch at home?
JL: I try to prioritize. I think it's obnoxious just to watch sports every hour. If I really don't want to see a game, then I'm down to go out to lunch or go shopping with Chrissy. . . .
CT: Watch Real Housewives. . . .
JL: I let her go on her online shopping sites too. That is part of our negotiation process.
DP: Who's the better athlete?
CT: [Laughs.]* I have more sports experience than John for sure.
JL: She's played more sports than I have, but I go to the gym all the time, so I'm in good shape.
CT: I'm in terrible shape.
DP: Who has the better body?
JL: She does.
CT: I'm feminine and curvy.
DP: A lot of swimsuit models date musicians. Why not date a normal guy?
CT: First of all, we interact with each other the most. John doesn't have the chance to meet a normal girl. He's on video sets and he's being presented with models. I think we understand each other's schedules. You're busy, they're busy. I don't know if I could go back to a normal guy at this point. I need someone who's driven and gone all the time.
DP: Do swimsuit models compete for who has the coolest boyfriend?
JL: I think Bar won this battle. Leo's pretty cool.
DP: When supermodels get together, do the boyfriends get to hang out?
CT: I love that every man has an image that we're all together all the time.
JL: They're always having pillow fights.
CT: I never see the girls. We did just have a rather glamorous lunch with Petra [Nemcova]. I couldn't stop staring at her. I was obsessed.
DP: Is there backstabbing among supermodels?
CT: How would I know? I'm not a supermodel.
DP: O.K., what defines a supermodel?
CT: First-name recognition is major for that, I think. The cover of Sports Illustrated. Movies.

*READERS CAN ASSUME THAT FROM THIS POINT FORWARD, ALL OF CHRISSY'S ANSWERS WILL CONTAIN LAUGHTER.

SOUND WAVES

Swimsuit '11 rocks a new playlist. And rolls out more video than ever

If there's one thing Swimsuit has been missing, it's a soundtrack. Well, no more. This year we've selected nine songs that capture the mood of Swimsuit and incorporated them into videos that are available at SI.com/swimvideo and on the Swimsuit iPad and Galaxy apps. And if you want to stay in a Swimsuit state of mind when you're jogging or commuting, the songs, by the seven bands below, are also available for download on iTunes through Ping; just search for the SI Swimsuit playlist. So what are you waiting for? Rock on.

JL: If you're famous enough to have name recognition in larger society.
CT: Yeah, I gotta change my name.
DP: Is there backstabbing among musicians, John?
JL: Not really. I don't feel like that many musicians are competitive with each other.
CT: Well, you're not in the rap game, either.
DP: Is there, like, East Coast–West Coast piano playing?
JL: Me versus Josh Groban [laughs].
CT: The thing about John, too, is he's a songwriter, and he's constantly doing things for all these artists. And in the end he wants everything to be popular for everybody.
DP: What's something sports-related in the apartment?
JL: All the TV's are pretty much devoted to sports or watching Real Housewives.
CT: You do have a Padres jersey in your closet, I just noticed.
JL: We have an A-Rod jersey in the house.
CT: Yes, I sleep in it.
JL: It was a gift for Chrissy because she's in love with him.
DP: Would you ever leave John for A-Rod?
JL: She definitely would.
CT: Yes. 100 percent.
DP: Really?
CT: Nooooo. A-Rod doesn't like my type, if you've noticed a trend. I'm not an athlete dater, really. I would get too jealous. They're really gone all the time. Different hotel rooms. At least I know where John is.
JL: Actually, athletes are probably home more than musicians.
CT: What, are you trying to talk me out of this?
JL: No, they have a season. Musicians are in-season all the time.
CT: You're like a therapist, Dan. We're just talking through. . . .
DP: I think I can help you two out. What's the strangest thing you ever wrote a song about, John?
CT: You wrote a morning-sex song.
JL: That's not strange.
CT: Not for us. . . . That was so inappropriate.
JL: It's called Good Morning. It's on my last album.
DP: Have you written a song about Chrissy?
JL: Good Morning.
DP: Which would you rather have: the cover of SI for Chrissy or a Grammy for John?
CT: He has too many Grammys already. I'm not on the cover yet.
JL: She needs the cover more than I need a Grammy.
CT: Thank you. That could have been a relationship-ending question, by the way.
DP: Have you thought about putting Chrissy on the cover of one of your albums?
CT: He gets the cover because he's a diva.
JL: If I were going to pick a model, I'd pretty much have to pick her at this point, or I wouldn't get any for a while.
DP: Do you think Terrelle Pryor will come back to Ohio State?
JL: I think he'll come back.
DP: Would you come back if you were him?
JL: Yes, because I don't think his draft position is high enough yet.
DP: But he has to miss the first five games.
JL: I think he'll be fine missing those games.
CT: Didn't Ben Roethlisberger miss a few games?
JL: My baby got some football! Look at that!
DP: Chrissy, do more people recognize you the less clothes you have on?
CT: Actually, yes, and I feel uncomfortable the more clothes I have on.
DP: John, do you have a problem with guys staring at your girlfriend?
CT: Nobody stares at me.
JL: No, I'm proud. □

BEHIND THE SCENES

BORACAY ISLAND, PHILIPPINES

TRUE SHANGRI-LA

The hotel doesn't falsely advertise—when you arrive at this lush resort, you've arrived

➤➤ The joy in reaching the best spot on Boracay, a seven-kilometer-long isle shaped like a bitten drumstick in the Philippine Sea, is amplified by the journey. "You have to work hard to get to paradise," a staffer joked—or so we assumed—ahead of the voyage. You'll need planes, to Los Angeles, Manila and then Kalibo; an automobile, to the tiny Panay port of Caticlan; and a powerboat, to hurtle you to Shangri-La's Boracay Resort and Spa.

Once there you can be lazy—lounge in the stone pools or sit beachside and watch the bancas (shallow longboats) row by—or return to the water. Boracay is a coral-flanked haven for scuba divers, and the resort has its own dive center, with hardy Brits who guide trips to sites with names such as Crocodile Island, Virginia Drop and the Bat Cave. (The large, harmless bats unexpectedly are part of the eco preserve's charm, swooping gracefully above the trees every evening near dusk.)

Another benefit to going on a dive is that it will work up your appetite. Shangri-La offers haute cuisine (even the colored marshmallows used for dipping in the chocolate fountain are ornate) in four restaurants, including Sirena, which sits atop a cliff and offers views almost as spectacular as the food.

Boracay has evolved from a hidden jewel of the Philippines, in the 1970s, to a backpackers' haven in the '80s and '90s, to a full-blown destination for tourists. But the Shangri-La's grounds are a refuge, and the island itself is still unburdened by an airport, mega-cruise-liner dock or four-lane highway. It's just two seven-kilometer coastlines of white sand, at a peaceful remove from the world.

In the bodypainter's words:
"She's so young—just 18—so it's all perfectly there: her lovely alabaster skin and that curvaceous body. She has a very bubbly personality and was patient for all the detailing work, like the crease in the suit's bottom, which makes it look like it's really being worn. If you paint everything flat, it's got no interest."

In the bodypainter's words:
"She's delicious in every single way. She's got this smooth, olive, porcelain skin, and it was an easy application—the fastest of all of them. And she's so captivating in front of the camera. She's like a young Elizabeth Taylor in Cat on a Hot Tin Roof."

In the bodypainter's words:
"She's like the dream surfer chick. The Maui Girl bikini, which is made in Hawaii, felt perfect for her. If you look closely, there are a lot of little pinholes and spots painted within spots. This one definitely was a great deal of work, but she's got this calmness about her—almost like she was meditating."

In the bodypainter's words:
"She's that stunning Brazilian, sexy, electric type of woman. She was really excited by that suit. She just oozes sex. The gold rings on the bottom took a considerable amount of time to build up because they've almost got a dimensional quality about them. There are highlights and lowlights within the gold."

In the bodypainter's words:
"This was a very complicated swimsuit. She's a really lovely person—calm, warm, very natural—and she came prepared. She knows it's a team effort. It is a pleasure working with people who realize that this is not abracadabra. The suit is like a patchwork quilt of different fabrics, and we did our very best to honor the realness."

A MAN'S GUIDE TO

DIY Body Paint

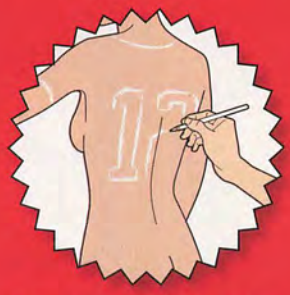
ILLUSTRATIONS BY JASON LEE

1. Identify your model, preferably someone with whom you share a high comfort level.

2. Choose the item of clothing you want to paint. Beginners should avoid complicated patterns.

3. To avoid a fluffy suit, remove all hair where you plan to paint. Shave or cut—waxing may leave visible irritation.

4. Ready the skin with a hot shower and unscented pure castor soap. Use medical alcohol for the dirtiest bits.



5. Sketch your design using a white grease pencil. Experts may add details, such as falling straps, for flair.

6. Choose your weapon. (Airbrushes poof follicles; paintbrushes matte them.) Close windows to stymie oglers, and crank up box fans to chase fumes.

7. Apply translucent setting powder as you paint to prevent running. Lock in your work with a spray sealer.

8. Hurry up and take those pictures; melting is inevitable.

9. Cleanup: Use isopropyl myristate for breaking down makeup and paint before a warm shower. Towel off, develop and off to the newsstands.

CANON PRESENTS GETTING THE SHOT

Just Another Day at the Beach

Photos by Karen Carpenter; ©2011 Time Inc.

BREAKS OF THE GAME: On his first Swimsuit photo shoot (top), photographer Bjorn Iooss tangled with one of the job's biggest hazards: a powerful wave that broke on him while he was shooting (above). Iooss kept his head and stayed on his feet, thrusting his Canon EOS-1Ds Mark III out of harm's way, and wound up with gorgeous images.

Photographer Bjorn Iooss tackled his first SI Swimsuit shoot in Maui in November 2010.

The first day of this shoot, you took a pounding from a wave. How did you hold up?
The shore break was fairly rough here in Maui, and no one was watching my back at that exact moment. I heard the screams from everyone else just before this wave hit, so I knew it could potentially be bad. Fortunately, I've spent my entire life on the ocean and have surfed for 20 years, so I managed to keep my footing and did everything in my power to keep the camera above the water. Once we realized it was fine, we went right back to work. Our model knew she looked amazing, so it didn't matter to us if I got completely eaten alive, so long as we got great shots.

You were shooting with Canon gear. Did that make a difference?
I was using the Canon EOS-1Ds Mark III and the EF 24–105mm f/4L lens in this picture. And yes, the durable gear makes your life so much easier. You can go to war with it or shoot beautiful women for the Swimsuit issue and have everything that you would need for either situation.

You started shooting at age 11. Was photography a natural career path because of your dad (veteran SI photographer Walter Iooss Jr.)?
By the time I was 14, I pretty much knew. There was never any pressure from my father, but there was constant support and affirmation. I've always had a lot of freedom to experiment and learn by doing. It was a great environment to learn the craft and enjoy all its possibilities.

WHAT'S YOUR ANGLE?

It's time to look at the world from a unique perspective. Introducing the new Canon EOS 60D. Featuring our first ever 270-degree 3.0-inch LCD screen that allows you to express yourself from any angle, whether it's an extreme high angle, low angle, or even self-portrait. And with an 18 Megapixel CMOS sensor, 5.3 fps shooting and multiple aspect ratios, you'll capture stunning photography from every direction. Then see beyond the still in 1080p Full HD video.

Inspired. By Canon.

BEHIND THE SCENES

TURTLE ISLAND, FIJI

TAKE IT SLOW

For guests—and even staff—of this glorious island, the name of the game is unwinding

At 8 p.m., with the spectacular night sky in its full glory, the staffers of Turtle Island Resort gather in the open-air dining room for the nightly kava ceremony. A drink made from the dried root of a local plant, kava has mild sedative properties—a pleasant calm if you can get past the muddy flavor. Resort guests are encouraged to join in, but the ritual is to the workers what the after-hours dance parties were to the resort staff in Dirty Dancing: a blessed chance to unwind after a hard day's work.

Of course for guests of Turtle Island, there is hardly want for relaxation. It is rare that visitors need raise a finger, much less a foot. As soon as the seaplane touches down 50 yards from shore, staffers greet guests in the water, singing and strumming guitars. Male visitors walk through the shallow water, but women are carried ashore by a pair of men in traditional Fijian warrior dress.

Guests stay in private huts called bures. The spacious wooded interiors boast vaulted ceilings and hot tubs, and to each is assigned a "bure mama" who tends to every need, from tidying up to planning the day's activities. Meals are often taken in groups, and here everyone knows your name and you can expect to be greeted with a "bula bula!" (the Fijian equivalent of aloha) wherever you go.

With only 14 bungalows, faces are always familiar, but with 500 acres to roam, finding seclusion is never an issue. Couples can schedule private picnics on any of the resort's 14 beaches or sunrise horseback rides along the coast. And if, after whiling away the hours floating on the calm, clear waters on a blue foam raft, you find yourself desperate for an escape, there's always the kava.

BEHIND THE SCENES

PETER ISLAND, BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS

JUST PLUNDERFUL

This tropical island, once inhabited by pirates, has retained bountiful treasures

Visitors often arrive with the notion that this place is called "St. Peter's Island." It is not—it's simply Peter Island, in honor of a 17th-century Dutch seaman. But upon docking here after a short boat trip from the airport on Tortola, first-timers can be forgiven for thinking that they've just happened upon the pearly gates.

At 1,800 lush and hilly acres, the jackknife-shaped Peter Island is the largest private island among the 60 or so land masses that make up the British Virgin Islands, and with its five secluded beaches and nearly 2-to-1 staff-to-guest ratio, it is a luxurious base from which to roam the surrounding seas, as pirates once did. (Although the buccaneers of yesteryear might have been less ornery had they had a 10,000-square-foot spa at which to receive treatment on their aching peg legs). Particularly recommended is a trip to the Cow Wreck Beach Bar on the nearby island of Anegada, where you'll be served a lobster so fresh it might pinch you.

Or you can secure one of the resort's 52 guest rooms or three villas—and then go nowhere. The most opulent of them is the six-bedroom Falcon's Nest, which comes with a full staff, a fitness area, a spa treatment room and an infinity-edge pool that serves as a stage for brilliant nightly sunsets.

According to legend, the pirate Blackbeard once marooned his men on nearby Dead Chest Island with nothing but a bottle of rum. In their desperation to get to Peter Island, they drowned, and their bodies washed ashore on what is now known as Deadman's Beach. You'll still find people lying for hours at a time on that beach's white sands. They're not dead, though. They're just in heaven.

MODEL: Lexus LFA
DRIVER: Rhys Millen

THERE'S ONLY ONE WAY TO ENGINEER A LEXUS

And that's the hard way. That's why we took no shortcuts in engineering an ideal balance between power and precision. That's why we used exotic, lightweight materials to construct the LFA's 4.8-liter V10—achieving 552-horsepower* from an engine that weighs as little as a typical V6. And that's why we didn't rely on existing production methods, but invented a new process to weave a lighter, stronger carbon-fiber chassis. It might be the hard way, but in the pursuit of perfection, the hard way is the only way.

JUST GO WITH IT

A STAR IS BORN

Brooklyn Decker

PHOTOGRAPHS BY STEWART SHINING

To the long list of Adam Sandler's contributions to Western civilization, we can now add the following: Brooklyn Decker's midriff, 2011 vintage. "I give Adam full credit for my abs," says Decker, who at 23 is appearing in her sixth SI Swimsuit Issue. "He made me laugh so hard every day that they got a full workout."

All those belly-toning chuckles came on the Maui set of the new romantic comedy Just Go With It, which serves as the backdrop for this photo shoot. Decker, in her first major movie role, plays a fifth-grade math teacher who becomes the love interest of Sandler's caddish plastic surgeon. After three years on the auditioning circuit, Decker was asked to come in for a table read the same week that she learned she was to be last year's Swimsuit cover model. "I was like, Great! Now, what in the world is a table read?"

She knows now and is on her way to becoming a Hollywood veteran: She will star in the alien invasion epic Battleship, in which she plays Liam Neeson's daughter. It is set to be released in May 2012.

In the meantime: As for those abs? You be the judge.

BEHIND THE SCENES

BANFF, ALBERTA

HIGH TIMES

You don't have to leave the hotel to find great wonders (but here's a tip: You really should)

The conventional guidebook description of scenic only begins to capture the beauty of Banff, the national park in the guts of the Canadian Rockies. A theme of vastness echoes through the place, flanked as it is by vertiginous glaciers and peaks, set under a panoramic canopy of sky. The landscape is all towering conifers and thick rivers and imposing waterfalls. Cars are dwarfed when they drive by moose and elk and, yes, even the odd grizzly bear.

The Fairmont Banff Springs is the ideal place to stay, a majestic resort where everyone from Marilyn Monroe to the Dalai Lama has lodged. As its nickname, the Castle in the Rockies, suggests, the hotel is grand in every sense, flush with a variety of restaurants, an on-site bowling alley and an adjoining, magnificent 27-hole golf course.

Funny, that with all this ambient bigness, Banff is doggedly determined to control growth. There are no condo developments in town, no bulging buildings, no clogged streets, no sprawl. One of the world's great tourist attractions, Banff doesn't feel touristy in the least. Wake up at the Fairmont, eat a breakfast of bison sausage, head outside, and within five minutes you're rafting on the Bow River, hiking in the mountains, on your way to Lake Louise or, better still, the lesser-known Moraine Lake, a glacially fed pool tinted a shade of milky blue you'll see nowhere else in the world. It was there that we were kayaking when we spotted subtle movements near shore. We paddled closer and found a family of beavers frolicking in the water, enjoying the day and the scenery like the rest of us. One of the countless small pleasures in the Land of Big.

Capella provided a gorgeous backdrop for Damaris (bottom, with hairstylist Patrice Delaroche), while Izabel and photographer Steve Erle found a lovely set in the city.

BEHIND THE SCENES

SENTOSA ISLAND, SINGAPORE

AWAY FROM IT ALL

You don't have to travel far for a respite from the bustle of one of the world's busiest cities

With five million people snuggled into an area one sixth the size of Rhode Island, Singapore is the world's third-most-densely-populated country—and arguably its most diverse: Nearly half the residents of the city-state are foreign-born (many are in the finance industry), and remnants of the cultures of the many colonial powers that once controlled Singapore are still evident. It's a city in which skyscrapers and ethnic enclaves are nestled side by side, one that gives off a constant energy.

But sometimes a person just wants to escape the bustle, and that's where Sentosa comes in. The island is separated from the mainland by a narrow channel, but entering Sentosa is like entering another world, replete with golf courses, shopping centers and wide-open man-made beaches. The most lavish resort on the island is Capella, where there appears to be a competition among staffers to see who can do the best pampering job. (Example: A staff member who had to inform two guests that the resort was temporarily out of a certain flavor of yogurt showed up at their room that night with a bottle of champagne and some homemade ice cream. The yogurt, safe to say, was soon forgotten.) Like Singapore itself, Capella blends old and new; the architecture is fairly modern, but the tearooms could serve as the set of a David Lean movie.

The resort faces south, so when guests sit by one of the three pools, the view they have beyond the lush trees is the Indian Ocean. The water is dotted with tankers and container ships—Singapore is the world's busiest port—offering a gentle reminder of the cosmopolitan city just on the other side of paradise.

BEHIND THE SCENES

MAUI, HAWAII

DAZZLING DELIGHTFUL DELICIOUS

Swimsuit pioneered the use of 3-D in print. This year it found a new dimension

This is most certainly not your father's 3-D. Your father's 3-D starred Vincent Price, had the word creature in the title and would, according to its poster, feature fantastic sights leaping—leaping!—off the screen so realistically that your father would be scared within an inch of his life. To watch this, your father would go to a cramped theater and sit among a bunch of people who were likely going to be spending most of the next hour and a half screaming.

This, though . . . this is something else. It's not macabre, it's not frightening, and it's meant to be watched from the comfort of one's couch.

In November three models—featured on the previous pages—went to Maui for a 3-D video shoot. Swimsuit and 3-D have a history; the 2000 and '07 issues included photo acts shot in 3-D. But this was the first time that 3-D video cameras were involved. A team filmed footage for a 30-minute feature that is available on Sony's PlayStation Network or on demand through its 3-D-compatible Bravia HDTVs and Blu-Ray players via Qriocity. (Two-dimensional footage is also available at SI.com/hawaii.)

For good measure, we sent along a photographer, Bjorn Iooss, with a good old-fashioned 2-D camera to photograph the girls on the gorgeous beach around the Grand Wailea resort between their video shoots. (Never pass up a chance to take a picture of a model on a beach being something of a Swimsuit credo.) To say things turned out well for all parties involved is an understatement. The sessions yielded some spectacular pictures—including the cover, the first for both Irina and Bjorn.

And the video turned out marvelously as well. The 3-D captured the girls' vibrant personalities, but rest assured: When these creatures—these beautiful creatures—leap off the screen, no one is going to feel like screaming.

Gout's root cause is high uric acid. If you have gout, high uric acid can lead to more attacks. To help reduce attacks, lower your uric acid.

ULORIC can help. ULORIC is clinically proven to help lower uric acid to a healthy level (less than 6 mg/dL).

Struggling with gout? Ask your doctor how ULORIC can help lower uric acid and bring gout's root cause down to a more manageable size.

Use of ULORIC

ULORIC is a prescription medicine used to lower blood uric acid levels in adults with gout. ULORIC is not for the treatment of high uric acid without a history of gout.

Individual results may vary.

Important Safety Information

- Do not take ULORIC if you are taking Azathioprine, Mercaptopurine, or Theophylline.
- Your gout may flare up when you start taking ULORIC; do not stop taking your ULORIC even if you have a flare. Your healthcare provider may give you other medicines to help prevent your gout flares.
- A small number of heart attacks, strokes, and heart-related deaths were seen in clinical studies. It is not certain that ULORIC caused these events.
- Tell your healthcare professional about liver or kidney problems or a history of heart disease or stroke.
- Your healthcare professional may do blood tests to check your liver function while you are taking ULORIC.
- The most common side effects of ULORIC are liver problems, nausea, gout flares, joint pain, and rash.

Please see accompanying Important Patient Information for ULORIC on adjacent page and talk to your healthcare professional.

You are encouraged to report negative side effects of prescription drugs to the FDA. Visit www.fda.gov/medwatch, or call 1-800-FDA-1088.

For more information, visit www.ULORIC.com or call 1-877-ULORIC-6.

(febuxostat) tablets

Uloric® (febuxostat) 40mg | 80mg tablets

Read the Patient Information that comes with ULORIC before you start taking it and each time you get a refill. There may be new information. This information does not take the place of talking with your healthcare provider about your medical condition or your treatment.

WHAT IS ULORIC?

ULORIC is a prescription medicine called a xanthine oxidase (XO) inhibitor, used to lower blood uric acid levels in adults with gout.

It is not known if ULORIC is safe and effective in children under 18 years of age.

WHO SHOULD NOT TAKE ULORIC?

Do not take ULORIC if you:

- take Azathioprine (Azasan®, Imuran®)
- take Mercaptopurine (Purinethol®)
- take Theophylline (Theo-24®, Elixophyllin®, Theochron®, Theolair®, Uniphyl®)

It is not known if ULORIC is safe and effective in children under 18 years of age.

WHAT SHOULD I TELL MY HEALTHCARE PROVIDER BEFORE TAKING ULORIC?

Before taking ULORIC tell your healthcare provider about all of your medical conditions, including if you:

- have liver or kidney problems
- have a history of heart disease or stroke
- are pregnant or plan to become pregnant. It is not known if ULORIC will harm your unborn baby. Talk with your healthcare provider if you are pregnant or plan to become pregnant.
- are breast-feeding or plan to breast-feed. It is not known if ULORIC passes into your breast milk. You and your healthcare provider should decide if you should take ULORIC while breast-feeding.

Tell your healthcare provider about all the medicines you take, including prescription and non-prescription medicines, vitamins, and herbal supplements. ULORIC may affect the way other medicines work, and other medicines may affect how ULORIC works.

Know the medicines you take. Keep a list of them and show it to your healthcare provider and pharmacist when you get a new medicine.

HOW SHOULD I TAKE ULORIC?

- Take ULORIC exactly as your healthcare provider tells you to take it.
- ULORIC can be taken with or without food.
- ULORIC can be taken with antacids.
- Your gout may flare up when you start taking ULORIC, do not stop taking your ULORIC even if you have a flare. Your healthcare provider may give you other medicines to help prevent your gout flares.
- Your healthcare provider may do certain tests while you take ULORIC.

WHAT ARE THE POSSIBLE SIDE EFFECTS OF ULORIC?

Heart problems. A small number of heart attacks, strokes and heart-related deaths were seen in clinical studies. It is not certain that ULORIC caused these events.

The most common side effects of ULORIC include:

- liver problems
- nausea
- gout flares
- joint pain
- rash

Tell your healthcare provider if you have any side effect that bothers you or that does not go away. These are not all of the possible side effects of ULORIC. For more information, ask your healthcare provider or pharmacist.

Call your doctor for medical advice about side effects. You may report side effects to the FDA at 1-800-FDA-1088.

HOW SHOULD I STORE ULORIC?

Store ULORIC between 59°F - 86°F (15°C - 30°C).

Keep ULORIC out of the light.

Keep ULORIC and all medicines out of the reach of children.

GENERAL INFORMATION ABOUT THE SAFE AND EFFECTIVE USE OF ULORIC.

Medicines are sometimes prescribed for purposes other than those listed in a patient information leaflet. Do not use ULORIC for a condition for which it was not prescribed. Do not give ULORIC to other people, even if they have the same symptoms that you have. It may harm them.

This patient information leaflet summarizes the most important information about ULORIC. If you would like more information about ULORIC talk with your healthcare provider. You can ask your healthcare provider or pharmacist for information about ULORIC that is written for health professionals. For more information go to www.uloric.com, or call 1-877-825-3327.

WHAT ARE THE INGREDIENTS IN ULORIC?

Active Ingredient: febuxostat

Inactive ingredients include: lactose monohydrate, microcrystalline cellulose, hydroxypropyl cellulose, sodium croscarmellose, silicon dioxide, magnesium stearate, and Opadry II, green
